Dark Water

仄暗い水の底から

(2002, dir. Hideo Nakata)

October 22, 2015, Thursday 5:10PM
Chandler-Ullmann Hall, Room #230

From director Hideo Nakata (Ring, The Ring 2) and renowned Japanese novelist Koji Suzuki (The Ring), comes a film that brings out a new level of fear hidden in the depths and buried far from memory. [A.D. Vision]

Yoshimi Matsubara fights to gain legal custody of her five year-old daughter Ikuko while the two live together in a dark, sullen and musty apartment building. Already insecure and uncertain about her future with her daughter, Yoshimi is haunted by murky water dripping through the ceiling and walls, and by the almost taunting appearances of a small red bag that once belonged to a girl who had mysteriously disappeared two years prior. Though she desperately struggles to find the strength within herself for Ikuko's sake, her horror intensifies as she comes closer to discovering the connection between these events, and is completely unprepared for the truth that lies ahead.
